Chapter 02: Literature Review
2.1 Diversity

Diversity is defined as a understanding, acknowledging, accepting, celebrating and valuing difference among people with due respect to class, age, gender, ethnicity, race, sexual orientation, physical and mental ability” (Aamodt, 2001). In other hand diversity management can be defined as a logical effort by the employee and organization. Diversity expresses the existence of people from variety of culture, society, backgrounds, colour, education, language, lifestyle, believes (Abbas, 2010)). Now a days diversity become a proactive concept. Almost all of organization now think about diversity and create different policy to manage it. Diversity can be a good competitive advantage because of various types of opinion can generate unique and creative way to solve many difficult problems (Amason, 1996). Business organization must have diverse to meet need and requirement of different group of consumer.

2.2 Employee Performance

Workforce diversity influences suggest that diversity can be beneficial or detrimental for an employee performance (Williams, 1998). Employee Diversity is better associated with problem solving skill and creativity organization need to create good diversified environment (Bantel, 1989). And employee diversity is negatively related with cooperation and cohesiveness (Pelled et al., 1999). The practice of good workforce diversity in the human resources management increases the employee and organizational Performance (Baer, 2012). Apart from that employee diversity enhanced creativity better problem definition, alternative solution, better idea, a wide range of perspective (Adler, 1986). It also discuss that the decreasing of same nature employee in the workforce, It has become difficult for an organization to develop equal opportunity and diversity management policy to manage the skill employee with different background employee in order to protect competitive position in the market (Gilbert, 2000). Workforce diversity creates conflict between employees. Conflict generate because of different ideas, behaviors, perceptions, attitude, religious differences, unjustified distribution of resources, political difference. Conflict is not bad sometimes it good it’s not always negative does not always create discord. It’s actually depending on how conflict handle. If its handle with proper manner it can be a source of development of organization (Knight, 1999). If the manager or supervisor ignores the conflict between employees it’s become a clash among them. As a result the clashes will go in personal and emotional and for long time it will be harmful for organization because its damage organizational culture, environment worker morale overall employee and organizational performance. It’s also might be reduce creativity of employee, innovation, quality (Jayne, 2004).

2.3 Age

Age diversity is unavoidable factors in organizations (Kunze, 2011). Based on different age group the employee performance and productivity vary (Gelner and Stephen (2009). There are two theory which clear up the relationship one is social personality and another is selfcategorization. People are suggested to portray themselves into certain groups based on dimension that are personally relevant for them on the basis of social personality and selfcategorization theory (Kunze, 2011). Because of generation gap lots of conflict arise which effect on employee performance. The test and preference of different generation is different from each other (Maznevski, 1994). Multiple age group lead inactiveness and advancement because of learning opportunity (Frink, Robinson et al. 2003, Graen 2003). There may be huge significant if supervisor don’t manage properly different age group for this reason conflict may be arise and organizational performance and productivity may decrease (Francisco, 2005)

2.3 Gender

We are in world which dominant by the male but day by day it decreases and women are engage workplace rapidly. Many organizations in the globe want to hire men mostly because they think men doing better performance rather than women and the ability of mange emergency situation and conflict women and men are (Leonard, 2003). According to Carr-Ruffino and Brown , the workforce diversity remain ineffective if gender issues are not concern in first then in turn off manage. The big challenge for an organization is to successfully overcome the thought the men and women are not equal. Kossek et al. found that to compare with men only 54% women are equal to men. Equal job opportunity in organization is play a vital role to improve the performance of the organizations employee. The societal permit removes the policies that discriminated certain classes of employee which result in increased organizational cost and organization failed to practice proper fair employment. Discrimination in organization in the time of hiring result in worker has to pay higher salary and sometime worker are shortage as a result organization have to hire less productive workers and talent skilled worker charge highest (Barrington and Troke, 2001; Becker, 1971).

2.5 Educational background

Employers are usually rejecting hiring employee when employee have no training, Experience, and good educational background. That means education background is most important part for employability level (Tracy and Sappington ;1993). Employee cannot find job without proper education and he cannot perform properly. Based on the education background employees productivity and performance vary (Daniel, 2009). The more education gives an employee more knowledge through this employee became more productive and mange everything smoothly. The greater of educated employee higher economic growth of organization.

Maximum employee agrees with this statement. Requirement should be transparent and based on their quality and educational background. They also told that authority should strongly maintain this matter. Sometime they recruit some unskilled and less qualified employee they are harmful for the company improvement. For that reason organization should strongly look at this matter.

Educational differences make conflict between the employees. Because an organization different type of educational background employee work here. In our country some MNC basically they offer attracting salary for hiring female employee. They give them equal opportunity for female employee with the male employee. That organization mean that they have equal right to get a good job with attracting salary that’s why they offer good salary when they recruiting female employee. Only 13% employee agree with this statement. With that they told that maximum organization should hiring female employee with attracting salary.
16. Fair treatment is given to all employees, whether they are male or female.

Basically it was confusing question for them. Most of employee deny that organization do not give equal treatment opportunity for both male and female. Because their opinion was like as in Bangladesh most of the organization do not give them equal treatment facilities. They mean that maximum organization provide male fair treatment in terms of female employee.
17. Opportunities for growth and advancement exist for Female in our organization.
