RECOMMENDATION

&

CONCLUSION
5.1 Recommendations

Based on the results of the study, the following recommendations are being made with a view towards improving perceived levels of service quality and improving the capacity of service personnel:

- Continuous Customer Service Training is required to improve greeting skills, which has reflection on the level of courteousness with which the officer interacts with customers.
- Reinforce the culture of answering inquiries as exhaustively as possible rather than just giving a basic answer covering the bare essentials. This depicts service personnel’s professionalism, especially with regard to the services offered by the bank and highlights the service personnel’s capability, efficiency and knowledge.
- Reinforce the need for staff to initiate contact with customers and to acknowledge their presence, even if by body language if not verbally. “Showing Customers You Care”.
- Remind staff of the requirement to wear a name badge in the workplace which is visible to customers.
- Give guidance to staff about giving business cards to customers during the service delivery. This is being insufficiently practiced in some branches as noted earlier, but this is a part of Customer Care standards.
- The service personnel should complete his/her service by expressing thanks/welcome, invite the customer to return, and maintain a smiling face throughout in order to make a good impression. Thus, customers can feel that they are always welcome to the bank.
- Signage instructions should be visible in different places or sections as appropriate, so that they are easily noticeable to customers.
