Chapter-1

Introduction
1.1 Introduction

The meaning of corporate social responsibility is raising in a world stoutly prejudiced by business trends and decisions. Corporate social accountability refers to a company’s guidelines of shielding consumers, employees, and the background in addition to it possesses base line. This is an authentic business model engaged by many large and small companies all over the world. Several corporations, still, only create the public awareness of social responsibility while using dissimilar methods in perform. In a period when international corporations are regularly tolerant by countrywide laws, company social liability often measured to be of principal significance.

The behavior of outsized corporations habitually has an influential collision on the surroundings and in the lives of the people concerned by them as clients or staffs. In spite of some global corporations are not essentially regulated by environmental or civil laws. Generally a mechanized plant produces much more contamination for local policies, for example, a number of companies will shift the place to a shape or state with more compassionate system rather than look for extra environmentally affable manufacturing methods. Several corporations apply such methods to avoid salary and labor laws as well as consumer protections. There are some benefits of CSR address volumes about how significant it is and why we should build an attempt to approve corporate social responsibility in business.

Several obvious advantages of corporate social responsibility are:

- Improving public image. When consumers decided to buy something from a company, first they judge its public image. Like employees volunteering an hour in a charity, to show that he or she is a brand dedicated to helping others. As a result, you’ll show more constructive to consumers.

- Increasing brand awareness and recognitions. When the company is committed foe ethical practices, after spreading it more people will know about the brand, that creates a strong brand image.

- Saving cost. Sometimes many simple changes like using less packaging will help to reduce costs.

- An advantage over competitors. Implementation of CSR, the company can be placed from competitors in its industry. The advantage build itself as a business committed to going one step further by making an allowance for social and ecological factors.
Increasing customer engagement. When the company is using supportable systems that should bark it from the tops. Placing it on the communal broadcasting networks and forms a layer out of the labors. Moreover it should display its energies to local media outlets in the hope it will give it some coverage. Customer will follow this and engage with the brand and operations.

Larger engagement of employees. Basically it is close to customer commitment, the company must be ensured that its employees distinguish its CSR strategies. It’s confirmed that employees appreciate occupied more for a company that has a good public image.

More benefits for employee. Much welfare for the personnel while company engages CSR. The workstation will be a more optimistic and creative for exertion, and by endorsing effects like volunteering, encourage personal and professional development.

1.2 Objectives of the Report
As a Bachelor of Business Administration (BBA) student I optimized to find the similarities between the learning and real world situation. So this can be measured as the objectives for the project in a broader sense.

a) To know the CSR practices of banking industry in Bangladesh
b) Identifying the relationship between real world and our learning
c) Providing the interpretation and explanation of information
d) Developing the skills for surviving competing world

1.3 Sources of Data
Mostly this report is descriptive but some part of it is exploratory as well. Only the secondary data is used in this report.

Secondary Data Which has been collected from different sources such as websites, the total methodology of the report is participating for the clearness and better understanding through flowchart structure.
1.4 Limitations of the Report

Some limitations which are faced for preparing the report

   a) I had to depend more on the internet but the obstacle I faced for preparing this report is that all information of the Banks’ CSR Practices was not available on the Banks’ websites.

   b) Insufficient time-period.
Chapter-2

Literature Review
Belal, Momin (2009) said that the greater part CSR studies in rising economies have determined on the Asia-Pacific and African regions and are evocative within nature, used pleased analysis methods and unhurried the extent and volume of disclosures limited within the annual reports. Such studies afford indirect explanation of the reasons after CSR approval, but of late, a handful of studies have started to survey management motivations last CSR directly through in-depth interviews global agencies.

Khan, Mottakin, Siddique (2013) examined the association among corporate supremacy and the amount of corporate social responsibility (CSR) disclosures in the yearly reports of Bangladeshi companies. A legality theory structure is adopted to appreciate the degree to which corporate supremacy uniqueness, such as executive possession, public possession, foreign possession, board sovereignty, CEO duality and attendance of audit committee power organizational response to various stakeholder groups.

Shobhani, Amran, Zainuddin (2009) told that this study attempts to return to the state of CSED through contented study. Annual reports of 100 companies, scheduled together on the Dhaka Stock Exchange and the Chittagong Stock Exchange, are chosen based on a stratified casual example technique. The learning reveals that the stage of revelation has enhanced over the last 10 years. Based on the projected research implement for pleased analysis, all sample companies (n = 100) in Bangladesh are found to disclose at least one item of disclosure on human resource issues; while community issues (47%), consumer issues (23%) and ecological issues (19%).

Khan (2009) explained the major findings are double: first, the study shows that the selected banking companies did some (albeit little) CSR coverage on a unpaid basis. Second, that the user groups are in errand of CSR reporting, and would like to see additional exposé. The existing disclosures by the chosen banks, however, are not plenty at all to calculate the social receptiveness of the organizations.

Narwal (2007) suggested that banks have a purpose view-point about CSR actions. They are concentrating mainly on education, unbiased growth (different strata of society), health, ecological marketing and customer approval as their center CSR behavior. The Indian banking industry is found to be adopting an integrated approach by combining CSR with the eventual customer satisfaction. Irrespective of location, the scenery of CSR behavior undertaken by banks is found to be alike.
Scholtens (2009) aimed at given that a structure to charge corporate social responsibility with global banks. Currently, it is mostly rating institutions like EIRIS and KLD that supply information about firms’ social behavior and presentation. However, this is expensive information and it is not clear how the rating institutions arrive at their end.

Kiliç, Kuzey, Uyar (2015) showed that CSR coverage of the banks enhanced during that age of time. The re of the study also exposed that there is a important optimistic effect of size, ownership dispersal, board work and board variety on the CSR disclosure of the banks.

Pérez, Martínez, Bosque (2012) told on corporate social responsibility (CSR) has particularly bigger in recent years and a lot of scales for measuring CSR picture have been urbanized in educational literature. Due to the background character documented in the implementation of CSR strategies, in this paper a new scale based on stakeholder theory is urbanized to assess customers’ insight regarding the CSR presentation of their banking service providers.
